The Penitentiary.

The annual reports of the Board of Directors and of the Superintendent of the Virginia penitentiary have been published.

Mr. Lynn, the superintendent, says: "Our receipts for the fiscal year from the hire of convicts have been more than sufficient to meet all our expenses for the maintenance of convicts, the erection of a fourth story to the penitentiary building, including the hospital, and the improvements to the office building, which cost $35,681.21.

"Our total expenses have been in-ereased by several items. The principal ones worthy of notice are the large increase in the number of convicts received during the year, the increase of our city water rent from $550 to $1,200 per annum, an increase in the number of guards, and the salary of the matron

AN ELOPEMENT ENDS IN TRAGEDY. An elopement ended with a tragedy in A beautiful line of Gentlemen's, Boys' and Oil City, Ky., Monday night. When the oil excitement came, the capitalists, who said they were developing the fields in opposition to the Standard Oil Company, got the services of an expert in building an oil refinery. John L. Morton, a well-known worker in the Morton, a well-known worker in the Ohio oil fields, was secured. He brought his family with him. Among his children was a pretty girl of 16. They arrived in Oil City last year. Several days ago Frank Potts, a young merchant of Findlay, Ohio, the former home of the Mortons, came to Oil City and asked Morton for his daughter Helen in marriage.

Morton had repeatedly ordered Potts from his house in their old home, and when the young man made bold enough to approach him on the subject of mar-riage to his daughter Morton grew furious. He told Potts that he should not even see his daughter, and if he at-tempted to do so he would get his head shot off. Potts tried to reason with Morton, but was ordered to leave the office. It is supposed that the young man saw his sweetheart secretly, for when Morton returned from his office Monday night Miss Helen could not be found. The neighbor whe had been watching her arrived who had been watching her arrived about an hour later with the story that the girl had eloped with Potts. He had seen her come from the rear of the house dressed as usual and start off towards the suburbs as if for a walk. He followed her and saw her meet Potts, who was in a buggy with two horses at-tached. As the girl started to get into the carriage her guard rushed forward to prevent it. The lover drew a re-volver and told him to stand off or be shot. Then they drove away.

Morton at once mounted a horse and started in pursuit. He carried a shotgun, and declared that he would follow them to Canada if it should be necessary to get the girl back. The elopers went toward Cave City, but got lost en route. The father reached that place first, and, learning that they had not arrived, decided that they had turned off a side road. As he was starting home he met them in the road.

off a side road. As he was starting home he met them in the road.

Morton called on Potts to surrender.
Potts replied by attempting to turn his buggy and escape. Morton fired at once. Potts fell from the buggy shot in the buggy his breast. One of the horses was kill-ed by a stray shot and the girl narrowly escaped a similar fate. It is not thought that Potts's wounds will prove fatal. His relations are en route from
